

Christian de Perthuis
Associated Professor

Christian de PERTHUIS, Associated Professor at the University Paris-Dauphine and advisor of the Caisse des Depots since 2001, is an economist by training. His research is currently focused on the economics of climate change.

Holding a PhD in Political Economy from the University of Paris I, Christian started his career in the agricultural sector before holding positions in two leading French research and forecasting institutes: first, at Rexecode, where he served as the Deputy Director and then at Bipe as General Director. Author of several articles and books, he has recently published “Towards a New Finance” a handbook on sustainable development and the book « Et pour quelques degrés de plus... » pub. Pearson.

At the request of the French government, he has led the research and design of the Domestic Offset Project approved for implementation in 2007. He is recognized as one of the leading experts of the European carbon trading scheme and of the new carbon finance.

Office : P 620

Email: christian.deperthuis@prec-climat.org